SCOUTERS HEARD MANY HAPPY TALES WEEK-ENDING AT BUCCOU DURING THE RAINY WEATHER WHICH PREVAILED

Fifty-Five Were Present for Second Session — Received Instructions in Sanitation—All thoroughly Enjoyed the Time and Are Anxious for Another Visit

Many were the happy tales told to the week-end Scouters at Buccou during the dismal rainy weather that ushered in the 25th and stayed over the 26th.

Fifty-five were present for the second session of the Bucks County Scout Leaders' Training Camp. This number included the 1929 and 1930 South Langhorne camporee patrol, which demonstrated the camporee method of patrol camping, under the able leadership of Eagle Scout Edward Baumeister, who is also junior assistant Scoutmaster. As a part of the Saturday afternoon program, the leaders traveled to the camporee site and received instructions in sanitation, under Eagle Scout Leroy Nowack; health under Star Scout Harry Ruble; and equipment under first class Scout Jesse Daugherty.

"It was my unpleasant duty to assign four boys of a nearby community to a reformatory today before leaving Doylestown to come over to the training camp. It is a recognized condition in our county of Bucks that Scouting is having a decided influence on the character development of our boyhood. How much better it would have been if the four boys, assigned this morning, had received character guidance, when they were younger, through the Scout program. I am keenly interested in furthering this program so that every boy will receive its benefits, and as chairman of the camping and health committee, to make available to every boy the out-of-door program through Camp Buccou." The above quotation was taken from the remarks by District Attorney Arthur M. Eastburn at the Saturday evening campfire when he spoke on "The Boy Scout Good Turn and Citizenship." Mr. Eastburn spent the whole week-end at camp and served as master of ceremonies at the campfire.

Statements from the two patrols, under visiting commissioners, David Neill, of Bristol; and S. A. Miller, of South Langhorne, added additional interest. Games and stunts by "Doug"

Withers, of Washington, D. C., and yells by "Detty" Detweiler, of Perkasie, gave more life to the program, which was happily concluded by toasting marshmallows before the fireplace. The Catholic leaders attended early mass at Flemington, and the camp chapel was held in the afternoon on the Good Times porch. This was led by Council President Thomas R. Stockham, who also gave the lesson. Hymns were led by "Detty" Detweiler, and a solo from one of the poems of James Whitcomb Riley was sung by Robert Belleville, of Yardley. Prayer was offered by James Baidler, of Ivyland, and the scripture was read by Donald Snively, of Eagley.

The snappiest, liveliest fellow during the whole training camp was "Doug" Withers, program director of the Washington, D. C., Council. "Doug" was always "on the job" for a song, stunt or any specialty. His talks on the out-of-door program for Scout troops will be a guide to all leaders for the next two years or more. On Sunday afternoon he demonstrated before the fireplace how to cook plank shad, and also demonstrated a tin can stove.

Visiting Commissioner David Neill spoke of the applying of the camporee program to the troop yearly program. County Scout Commissioner William Burgess, of Morrisville, attended the camp and spoke of his years of experience, during the discussion period. Scout Executive Livemore spoke of plans for the yearly program, Scoutmasterhip and advancement. Assistant Scout Executives Robert X. Perry and W. Fred Hauser served as councilmen on "conducting the inter-patrol Scout meet." Judges of the inter-patrol contests were Arthur Eastburn and William Burgess. Mr. Hauser also led a discussion on "Boys Do Not Need Discipline."

The mess provided by Chief Wayne Stauffer, of Perkasie, "struck the spot." He was ably assisted by Scouts William Carlin and Samuel Cantely, of Chalfont.

Everyone is hoping for at least one dry week-end training camp in July.

PRELIMINARY PLANS TO FIGHT BEETLE PEST

Will Also Wage War On Corn Borer and Other Devastating Insects

SURVEY IS MADE

HARRISBURG, April 30.—Preliminary plans for the summer campaign against the Japanese beetle, the European corn borer and other devastating insects found in the Commonwealth were announced today by R. H. Bell, director, bureau of plant industry, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture.

The extension in the Japanese beetle quarantined area was the smallest during 1930 of any recent year. Sixteen townships in Lycoming and Clinton counties were added to the lightly infested area, while eight townships in Cumberland, Perry and Union counties, which were in the lightly infested area during the past year, were placed in the generally infested area.

In the "lightly infested area," restrictions are placed on the movement of nursery and ornamental plants, sand (except for construction purposes), soil, earth, compost, and manure but not on the movement of farm products. In the generally infested area restriction will be continued practically the same as in the past.

According to present plans, the road patrols will begin work about June 15, and will be stationed at the edge of the generally infested area. In most cases, these stations will be at approximately the same points as a year ago.

Scouting for new beetle infestations will be done as in the past, largely by the Federal Government. It is expected also that the Federal office will continue the policy of liberating parasites at all outlying points where the beetle infestation is sufficient to support the parasites. While traps will be used more generally in scouting work to find new infestations, they are not recommended as an effective control measure except when used on a community-wide basis, Mr. Bell said.

New regulations for the control of the European corn borer make only minor changes in the requirements as enforced during 1930. The important provision in the quarantine for the area as a whole is the restriction placed on the movement of corn, broom corn, sorghums and sudan grass which cannot be moved from points within the area to points outside. The young woman who will be Bristol's representative, and who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Minol J. Hill, has issued invitations to the several young women to gather at her home, 628 Radcliffe street, following the dedication exercises and parade. Light refreshments will be served, and the fair sponsors will enjoy the hospitality of Miss Hill and her parents.

Burgesses of nearly 30 boroughs in the two States have named their representatives, and already sent acceptances to the committee in charge. Previous to the program the young women will meet at the club house of the Rohm & Haas Chemical Company, Maple Beach, a short distance from the Pennsylvania approach. DOROTHY DESCAMPS

NOTICE

Upon request, it has been decided to add a Firemen's Section to the parade, which is to be held on Saturday afternoon, in connection with the ceremonies incident to the dedication and opening of the new Burlington-Bristol bridge.

This section will form on the north side of Jefferson avenue, with the right of line resting on Wood street. This section will be led by the Chief of the Consolidated Fire Department, to be followed by the "Pumper" of the same company. All other pieces of fire apparatus will fall in line in the rear of the Consolidated company. Headley Manor Company and Newportville Company and all other companies from lower Bucks county which would like to enter the parade will take their places in this section in the order of their arrival at the place of formation.

The decision to add this section to the parade was made too late to extend invitations to out-of-town companies, but the invitation is now extended through the public press, to the fire companies in Morrisville, Yardley, Langhorne and Newtown, and all other companies in lower Bucks county, to join us in this demonstration, should they so desire.

This section will follow the Automobile Dealers' section in the parade. All companies from out of town, which decide to parade, are requested to telephone their acceptance of the invitation, to Chief James L. McGee, telephone number 29, Municipal Building.

By order of the PARADE COMMITTEE.

BANDITS FOUND LOOTING TRAIN OPEN UP FIRE

Conductor Halts Their Work As Fourth Car Is Entered

GOODS TOTAL MUCH

PHILADELPHIA, Apr. 30.—(INS).—Three daring train bandits fired on a Pennsylvania Railroad conductor early today when he caught them looting a freight train near Willow Grove on the Trenton branch of the system. The men broke into three cars while the long freight had stopped at a water tower at Heaton. The amount of the loot obtained by the bandits had not yet been determined but it is feared may amount to several thousand dollars.

The train loaded with valuable freight cargoes was bound from Harrisburg to New York and had stopped to take on water when the conductor, John Chambers, of Harrisburg, discovered the men breaking into the cars. He came upon the trio as they were opening the fourth car. As he approached the men he called out to a number of railroad police and the bandits opened fire, running as they shot. They jumped into a truck they had brought with them and escaped.

Pennsylvania Railroad police, State Police, and Abington and Willow Grove police were summoned by Chambers but no trace of the bandits could be found when they arrived. A check-up was started immediately to determine the amount of valuables taken from the three cars broken into.

Chief of Police E. Z. Swazey, of Willow Grove, believes he saw the robbers about half an hour before the robbery on the Davisville Road. He said he saw a truck with New Jersey license tags stopped near the scene of the robbery while he was on his way to perform other duties. The men were standing about the truck he said and when he stopped his car and approached them, one of the three busied himself with a flashlight and all three climbed on the parked truck and drove away. They stopped again a short distance up the road, but he had to continue on his way.

BLIMP AND AIR YACHT TO BE HERE ON SATURDAY

Will Be in Vicinity of New Bridge During The Dedication

TO BLOW FIRE SIRENS

A blimp from the U. S. Naval Air Station, Lakehurst, N. J., and an air yacht from the Keystone Aircraft Corporation will be in the vicinity of the Burlington-Bristol bridge during the dedication ceremonies on Saturday.

These announcements were made last night at a meeting of the General Bridge Celebration Committee held in the Elks Home, Burlington, N. J.

The Keystone Air Yacht, an eight-place amphibian with accommodations for six passengers, will be sent to the bridge site Saturday afternoon, there to rest on the river during the ceremonies.

After the exercises, the pilot, Paul Hoygard, research engineer of the Keystone Aircraft Corporation, manufacturers of the yacht, will fly the craft over the parade groups in both towns.

A splendid bit of color in the sky will this mean, with the maroon hull and silver wings glistening against the sky.

The craft which is a variation of the type built by the Keystone Corporation for the government, is a splendid piece of workmanship, and well speaks the industrial trend of Bristol.

The bridge siren will be sounded when the span is cleared of people and the procession ready to start. This will be a signal for the fire sirens in both Burlington and Bristol to blow, and thus advise the residents of the two communities that the parade has started.

The Harriman Hospital ambulance, a truck from the Consolidated Fire Company and an automobile wrecker will be stationed at the Pennsylvania end of the bridge. The ambulance will take care of any who might be injured, the fire apparatus will safeguard any automobiles which might catch fire and the wrecker will be on hand to drag stalled cars out of line.

Over-Night Hike and Camp Indulged In by Troop Four

On Monday evening the following leaders were appointed: Senior patrol leader, Richard Tison; junior assistant Scoutmaster, Orlando Carmosine; patrol leader, Alfred Camillucci; assistant patrol leader, Angelo DePasquale; scribe and treasurer, Orlando Carmosine.

PROBLEM OF THE SURPLUSES

Low prices for natural staples constitute a main factor in the present depression of international trade. Purchasing power has been reduced to the point where surpluses in raw materials continue to pyramid and mills and factories to close down. Having failed to find new outlets for their surpluses the sugar, wheat, oil and cotton producers face the necessity of curtailing their output.

Seven of the largest sugar exporting nations have agreed to limit their exports over a five-year period, while this constitutes in the international field a restraint of trade forbidden by United States laws, there has been no protest because low sugar prices have bankrupted vast areas and brought hundreds of thousands of men, women and children face to face with starvation.

It is important that no monopoly or price regulating scheme impose a hardship upon the great mass of consumers, but it is more important that countries obtain a fair price for the fruits of their labors and capital. There is no threat of profiteering in the sugar export agreement.

Diverse interests have unfortunately prevented the wheat growing nations from arriving at an agreement for curtailment of production to end the inexcusable and disastrous overproduction. The United States not only condones such national and international agreements but encourages them, although the consumer must pay the bill. But there would be no reluctance on the part of the consumer for the reason that restoration of agricultural prosperity would restore industrial prosperity.

CHILD HEALTH DAY

One of man's redeeming virtues is his love of little children. His wrath turns quickest against those who torture or neglect the defenseless young. This sentiment runs strong in the breast of President Hoover, whose proclamation calling upon the nation to observe National Child Health Day on May 1 was more than a public duty perfunctorily performed.

The chief executive, like many others, looks upon deformed, crippled, weak and undernourished children as a national disgrace, because usually these cases are preventable. He looks forward to the time when they will have been reduced to but a fraction of their present number.

There is a challenge to the American people and their governmental agencies in statistics showing 6,000,000 undernourished, 382,000 tubercular, 300,000 crippled, 50,000 partially blind, 14,000 blind, 342,000 deaf, 200,000 delinquent, 500,000 dependent and 450,000 mentally defective children in the United States. This challenge is made still more commanding by 1,000,000 children with diseased hearts and 1,060,858 under 16 years of age gainfully employed.

National Child Health Day is part of a movement to correct these appalling conditions. It concentrates public attention on the pitiful plight of thousands of children as well as upon the inescapable fact that a healthy nation depends upon a healthy race of children.

MUCH PRODUCE SOLD BY PENNA. GROWERS

More Than Two and One-Half Million Dollars Worth
Disposed Of

SHOWS A BIG INCREASE

HARRISBURG, April 29.—(INS).—More than two and a half million dollars worth of officially-inspected and graded products were sold by Pennsylvania growers during the past season, according to estimates made by D. M. James, supervising inspector of the bureau of markets, state department of agriculture.

This is an increase of approximately one million dollars over the estimated value of graded products sold during the previous season, department of agriculture officials said.

James' compilation shows a total of 2,575 carloads of graded and Federal-state inspected fruits were shipped and 44,000,000 pounds of raw canning products were sold on a graded basis during the 1930-31 period, compared with 2,276 carloads of fruit and 13,000,000 pounds of canning products during the previous season.

Grading of carlot shipments of fruit covered 78 per cent of the total carloadings in Pennsylvania, producing sections during the year, the statistics indicate. Products sold under state supervision to canners included apples, cherries, grapes, beans and tomatoes.

"Wide adoption of official grading methods," said James, "proved a great aid to Pennsylvania fruitgrowers in marketing their 1930 crops. Apple growers who graded to meet U. S. standards found themselves able to take advantage of the outlet offered by export markets, which was brisk and commanded a price generally in excess of that offered in the domestic market."

Pinochle and bingo party will be given by the Wide-Awake Social of the Croydon Fire Company at the fire house Saturday evening, May 9th, at 8.30. This wide-awake social is composed of active members of the fire company, who are working to obtain a treasury, large enough to provide the active workers with uniforms. When they are called to fires these men very often have their clothes ruined by chemical while trying to extinguish a fire. Dr. Gonzalez gives medical treatment gratis to any firemen hurt at a fire. As yet there is no tailor who offers a suit of clothes for those destroyed while giving service at a fire.

There will be services Friday 8 a. m. with holy communion celebrating St. Phillips' and St. James' day.

PRINTING DIFFERENT IN WASHINGTON'S TIME

Government Then Had Work
Done in Private Plants

NOW HAS MODEL PLANT

Facing the Union Station in Washington is a great brick building which must take the eye of every visitor to the national capital. If the visitor inquires what it is, he will be told that it is the Government Printing Office, that here is printed the Congressional Record, all public documents, stationery for all the Government Departments and for Members of Congress. As he sits at work so important, this printing is done in the largest and best equipped establishment and with the largest number of linotype and monotype machines in the world. That is Government printing as it is done today.

With the nation's celebration of George Washington's Two Hundredth Birthday imminent, it becomes of interest to inquire how the Government got its printing done during Washington's Administration when the United States began its career as a republic. On the authority of the Public Printer, George H. Carter, the Division of Information and Publication of the George Washington Bicentennial Commission is able to present some interesting facts on the origin and growth of Government publication and printing.

The first mention of printing for the Government of the United States occurs in the very first session of Congress in 1789, in the form of recommendations to Congress that proposals be invited "for printing the laws and other proceedings of congress," both Houses having entered into an agreement to have their journals and acts printed. But not until 1794 do we find Congress ordering an expenditure of $10,000 for "firewood, stationery and printing." Prior to this act, the cost of printing was paid out of the general contingent fund.

In 1804 we find Congress instructing the clerk to advertise for its printing and to award the contract to the lowest bidder, and for five years this contract system prevailed, with no great satisfaction, however. In 1818 the Senate and House appointed a joint committee to inquire into a better method. This committee reported unanimously and emphatically in favor of a government printing establishment, as the most economical and satisfactory, yet for more than forty years the report was ignored and Senate and House balloted each year on the choice of a printer to handle its work.

Finally the expense and impracticability of this policy led to an Act of Congress on June 23, 1860, which authorized governmental printing under a "Superintendent of Public Printing." In 1861, $135,000 was appropriated for the purchase of an established printery. Evidently this was, for the time, a modern plant, employing 350 people, and there for the first time the Government became its own publisher. President Lincoln appointed John D. Deere of Indiana as Superintendent, who promptly reported decreasing the cost of our national printing at least 15 per cent below the old contract price. As the business of governing the nation grew, the government printery was enlarged, until 1899, when the present great building, to cost $2,430,000 was authorized. In the meantime the "Superintendent of Public Printing" had been named simply the Public Printer.

Now this model plant employs 4,500 people, with an annual payroll of $7,647,000 and a total yearly expenditure of $11,834,000. Surely George Washington would approve the growth and efficiency of this institution and the immense advance it represents over the primitive methods of printing and handling Government documents in use during his First Presidency.

Lenten Offerings To Be Presented by Church Schools

that city was being swept by the Chinese Reds, acting in the true capacity of a bishop, a shepherd shepherding the sheep. Despite the gloomy and pessimistic aspects that the situation engendered Bishop Gilman never lost confidence in the ultimate victory of the best hopes, ideals and aspirations of the Chinese. He remained optimistic.

This leader's life and works will stand out through all the welter of rapine, plunder, bloodshed and destruction, as a living witness of Christian manhood and a radiant example of a Christian bishop.

Bishop Gilman's faith, as Rev. Amos Goddard, rector of St. Luke's, Newtown, a friend and fellow missionary worker in China, so accurately states, "has proved an anchorage to the bewildered and scattered forces of the Christian Church under his supervision. His advice and judgment have shown wisdom, moderation, good sense, and Christian hope even when things looked the blackest and the gates of hell seemed prevailing." He writes: "In spite of all the difficulties and dangers the Chinese have been making progress in the last four years. Ten times as many children are attending our primary schools. Discipline is being restored in the higher schools. Wide asphalt streets are being laid down in the old Chinese cities. Health campaigns are being vigorously carried through. In their attitude toward the Christian Church it may be said that that portion of the Chinese people who were favorable to the Christian Church before, are now immovable in their adherence to it. Another large section is turning to the Christian Church as the only solid rock to be found in these days of storm. The radical unit which comprises the Chinese dominated by Russian influence grows virulent. This means greater danger for the Christian leaders but it is a stimulant to greater faith and devotion on the part of the Church as a whole."

And the Church Schools of Bucks County are a part of that while. Their faith, it is believed, will be greatly stimulated to a greater devotion, loyalty and support of the missionary enterprise when they hear and receive the message that Bishop Gilman will deliver, a message born out of his own personal experiences and tried faith.

Two Brothers Die Within Few Hours of Each Other

DOYLESTOWN, April 30.—Two brothers, one a veteran lawyer and the other a prominent farmer, died within a few hours of each other yesterday.

Joseph J. Broadhurst, 82, of Langhorne, prominent member of the Bucks County Bar Association, died of a heart attack at his home at 4 o'clock yesterday morning. Six hours before that, his brother, Horace G. Broadhurst, 76, died at his home in Buckingham township from pneumonia.

Joseph Broadhurst several years ago was a candidate for judge of Bucks county on the Democratic ticket, opposing the late Judge William C. Ryan, Republican, but Mr. Broadhurst was badly defeated. He was the second oldest member in point of service at the Bar in Bucks county, being admitted fifty-five years ago. He attended a session of court here a week ago.

Horace Broadhurst died on his farm, a historic spot, where previous to the Civil War one of the stations of the famous underground railway was located.

CROYDON

First ball game of the season between Edgely and Croydon schools, ended in a score of 5-2 in favor of Croydon. The game was very snappy. Both teams were in the game to the finish. The pitching of Elwood Polk excelled for the home team. Game was played Tuesday afternoon, State Road and Emily avenue.

Preliminary Plans To Fight Beetle Pest

side. The movement of broom corn, sorghums and sudan grass, however, are no longer restricted.

Enforced clean-up of corn remnants will be carried out in Erie and a portion of Warren counties. Starting the first week in May, inspectors of the Department will visit farms in this area and in case farmers have not voluntarily made the necessary clean-up, the Department will be compelled to do the work and charge the expense to the farm owner or operator. The requirements of the clean-up are: (1) All corn stalks, corn cobs, heavy weeds and all corn fodder remnants of any kind, regardless of the location, must be burned. (2) Corn stubble must be completely plowed under or broken off at the ground, gathered and burned before May 1.

Scouting work in the interior counties will be done by the State to determine the degree of infestation, as well as the effectiveness of the clean-up in the counties where this effort is required. Federal scouts will search new areas to determine any spread of the insect.

Road patrols along the corn borer quarantine line will be maintained by Federal authorities during the late summer and fall to enforce the regulations which prohibit the transfer of corn from the infested area.

Other insects, especially the Oriental fruit moth and the Mexican bean beetle, will be given attention during the year. Parasites of the Oriental fruit moth are being reared in the laboratory at Chambersburg and will be released during the season in orchards in that section. The results will be studied carefully to determine the effectiveness of parasites as a means of controlling this serious fruit pest. Field tests on insecticides and fungicides as a pre-requisite to registration and as a check on claims made by the manufacturers will be conducted by the bureau on a larger scale than last year. A survey has been made during recent months of the insecticides being offered for sale throughout the State.

Young and wealthy Dave Ordway's plane crashes in the Florida groves of Joan Marbury. Joan, assisted by her cousin, Sally, has difficulty in running the plantation due to financial straits. Damage to the property following Joan's repulsion of the advances of Mueller, neighboring planter, adds to the hardships. Dave is held up and robbed by Mueller when he refuses Mueller's exorbitant demands for damage to his trees when Dave's plane swooped to a landing. That night, Mueller sets fire to the plane. A fight ensues and Joan rescues Dave from Mueller. Later, Dave's former fiancée, Barbara Holworthy, and his friends, Gerry Flemming and Talbot Henderson, visit him. Instant antagonism is aroused between Barbara and Joan. Mueller calls.

CHAPTER XIII.

MUELLER came to a stop just inside the doorway, glancing from one to another of the guests. The burly Italian stood beside him, both hands thrust deep into the pockets of his gray flannel jacket.

"Evening, everybody," said Mueller, genially. "Mind if I take a seat? Go right on with your eating."

Dave, fighting down an impulse to leap at the intruder, sat still, watchful, wondering how long he could control his wrath. He was glad to see that Mueller bore evidence of their recent conflict. At one corner of the full-lipped mouth was a strip of surgeon's plaster, which twisted the man's face into an oddly quirked smile. Another piece of adhesive secured to hold Mueller's left ear in place. Dave permitted himself a wintry smile. The agate hard eyes met his. "Hello, kid," said Mueller, genially. "How you feeling?"

"Didn't I hear Miss Marbury say she was sorry she couldn't ask you in?" asked Dave, very, very quietly.

Nothing to Fear

"Tut, Davey," admonished Talbot, cheerfully. "That's not polite. The gent came for a little chat."

Mueller's brown eyes swivelled to Talbot's round, ingenuous face, then turned to Gerry, who was polishing the glittering metal of his mouth organ with the palm of his hand. He appeared to measure to classify Dave's two friends according to some system of his own and to find them unworthy of consideration. But when he looked at Barbara, he studied her flawless features with obvious appreciation while she matched him look for look. His thick lips screwed themselves into a smile and he turned back to the tense, silent Dave.

"You might introduce me to this lady," he suggested. Then, suddenly, he turned and inspected her again. When he looked back at Dave, his smile had become a leer. "Say, I'll bet this is the doll who told you she wasn't your sweetie any more!"

Dave's long legs worked their way beneath his chair, tensed and ready to spring. Something in the expressionless face of the silent Italian gave him pause. The man was staring at him, his hands rind in his pockets. Dave relaxed. No use starting a fight here. These two pockets would stream fire at his very first move.

"Davey, dear," pouted Barbara, with a sharp glance at the silent Joan and Sally, "I'm disappointed in you. Have you been confiding in this gentleman? If you have, you'd better explain to him that we often have these little disagreements."

"I doubt if he'd be interested," snapped Dave. "He seems to have something on his mind. What is it, Mueller? What did you crash in for? Tell us and get out. I'd like to finish my dinner and I can't while you're in the room. That Woolworth perfume you're doused with turns my stomach!"

Mueller, still wearing his mask of amiability, calmly seated himself in a chair close by the side of his aide. Joan, her face white and drawn, stood silently by the door.

"You from New York, Mr.—er—Mueller?" asked Gerry, who had apparently not even glanced at him and was still assiduously polishing his harmonica.

"Get your hands up on the table!" Snapped Mueller.

"Yes. Why?" countered the other, surprised by the unexpectedness of the question. Gerry's bespectacled face was bland as he inspected his image in the mirror-like surface of his instrument.

"And before that where—Sicily?"

"What is it to you?" demanded Mueller harshly. "Nothing, nothing," murmured Gerry, vaguely. "Face doesn't go with name, that's all. Dutch name, Wop face. Funny, Angelo Pietro Mueller, or something like that, eh? Haw!"

Ordered to Move

"Don't mind our little friend here, Mr. Mueller," begged Talbot, earnestly, as the visitor showed unmistakable signs of anger. "He's always been a little dim. If he had just one drink he'd put his head on the table and have a good long cry."

"Shut up!" snapped Mueller, his eyes darting suspiciously around the table. They came to rest on Joan's pale face. "Listen, girlie," he said, "these smart-arts of yours got to be out of this country by breakfast time tomorrow, see?"

Dave laughed out loud. Mueller swung on him with a snarl. "What you laughing at?" he demanded menacingly. "Think I'm wisecracking, hey?"

"You don't understand, Mueller," said Dave, still smiling. "I was just telling my friends, here, eyes and held them in his level stare.

"Mueller," he said quietly, "unless that plug-ugly of yours is the fastest man on the trigers in the United States, I'd advise you to get out of here while your legs will still carry you. I'm losing my temper."

"Get your hands up on the table," snapped Mueller, his brown eyes suddenly turning to black.

One or the Other

"Who are you going to shoot at first?" asked Talbot, conversationally, his own hands thrust beneath the edge of the table. "There's a ripe and lusty question. If you decide to pop Dave, here, there's no telling what I'm going to do. Pop me, first, and Dave'll act up. Button, button, who's got the button? Why not just toddle along and let us finish a nice, jolly little meal, eh?"

For an instant no one moved. There was not a sound in the room except for the breathing of the eight tense people who stared at one another, waiting for the Damoclean sword of conflict to fall. The Italian gunman kept his gaze upon the quiet Dave, who sat perfectly still, ready to hurl the candlestick at the flicker of an eyelash. Mueller glanced from Dave to Talbot, trying to fathom the riddle of their hidden hands. At last he shrugged.

SPORTS
FIFTY-SEVEN DRIVERS TO COMPETE AT LANGHORNE

LANGHORNE, April 30.—Fifty-seven entries for the opening automobile race of the season in the eastern United States are listed for the Langhorne Speedway 100-mile dirt track grind here Saturday. The field is the finest that has ever been gathered together for a speed event in this country.

The track is in excellent condition and with favorable weather conditions there is little doubt but what records will be shattered. A record crowd is expected for the opening race owing to the increased interest in automobile racing as a thrilling sport.

The participation of Billy Arnold, national A. A. A. champion for 1930 in the event here Saturday adds much prestige and color to the field of entries which will otherwise be as brilliant as those presented at Langhorne last year.

Arnold's rise to fame last year was meteoric to the extreme. Starting at Indianapolis just as one of many top-notchers, Arnold completed the 500-mile grind in a sensational non-stop journey in near record time for the track. But for a six-car accident that blocked the course and delayed "traffic" for ten laps, Arnold would have undoubtedly set up a new mark for average miles per hour when he was clocked at an average speed of slightly over 100 miles an hour.

Frank Brisko, one of the other headliners of Saturday's opening race, is banking on the possibilities that 1931 should be "his year." Heralded at the opening of the "500" last year at Indianapolis as one of the most likely "unknowns" for national honors, Brisko laid extensive plans for his campaign. Billy Arnold, however, was the only person to spoil his dream. He dashed under the wire ahead of the pack. On October 18, last year, Brisko finished second in the Langhorne event. So that Brisko believes that his time for winning is here.

Because of the large number of entries the qualifying trials will get started Friday afternoon at 1 o'clock and will continue on Saturday morning at 10 o'clock. The big race will get under way on Saturday afternoon.

Two Buddin' "Bobbies"?

By HARDIN BURNLEY

WHEN Bobby Jones decided last fall to retire from golf competition so he might be enabled to establish a comfortable fortune, a great void was left in the world sports scene. For the 28-year-old Jones in less than ten years had become the supreme master of the links, claiming his career by winning the game's four major events—the British and also the American open and amateur championships all in one season. He defeated the world's best professionals and no fellow-amateur ever seriously threatened his supremacy.

Now that Jones has retired—and he attracted paying galleries that made organized amateur golf so prosperous in recent years—that division of the game anticipates a decline in receipts. There are a dozen conspicuous and rather colorful amateurs throughout the nation but all combined would not have a tenth the crowd magnetism of the one and only Bobby.

Among the leading amateurs who have many admirers and who plan to compete for the American title this year is Eugene Homans, of Englewood, N. J., who was defeated by Jones in the final last season and who, at 22, is facing a brilliant future. He is a Princeton graduate and son of a famous old Nassau football back. Familiar with golf since childhood, Homans has been advancing steadily for three years as an amateur star. The New Jersey youth, should reach the final in the next amateur, will have no Bobby Jones to halt his march to the crown. But among other promising talent, he may find another "budding Bobby" in—

Charles Seaver, a 19-year-old Stanford student who threatens to burn up California and other links this season. He's of a powerful athletic build, so strong that he may some day be known as the best long ball driver in the game. This will be a critical golfing year for both Homans and Seaver. For 1931 ought to determine definitely whether Gene or Charley is likely to continue on to links greatness or be mere stars.
